The newly amended limitation of "wherein the folder content comprises at least one component configured to have both a folder characteristic and a leaf characteristic". would not appear to overcome the cited art:.

It is appears to the examiner that a "leaf characteristic" is present in all hierarchical trees.

The applicant provides a figure from Cordes to describe how the the applicant's newly amended claims overcome the cited art. However, isn't the fact that Cordes search appears within a leaf within the tree, and relates to other leafs in the tree (i.e., the search results), would that not make it a "leaf characteristic"?

The applicant states on page 2 that the classical folder enviornment do not address leaf characteristics. It would seem that the classical hierarchical tree that has branches and branches and ultimately a leaf on the tree could be said to have leaf characteristics.

The examiners are always available for interviews.
